Beverly Roberts Curnow was a student of legendary accordionist, Carmen Carrozza. She was the winner of the 1965 American Accordionists' Association (AAA) national virtuoso competition and went on to win that year's world title at the Coupe Mondiale held in Valetta, Malta (the first female contestant to do so). Beverly earned Bachelor and Master degrees in Music Education from New York University and Columbia University, respectively. Following graduation, she taught choral, instrumental, and general music at all levels in the Wilson Area public school system of Easton, Pennsylvania for 35 years. Remaining an active accordionist throughout her teaching career, Beverly continues to make many guest artist and concert appearances for the AAA. She also plays in pit orchestras for Broadway musicals and shows, and performs as soloist with the Allentown (Pennsylvania) Band. Beverly currently serves as a member of the AAA Governing Board, and in that capacity, is a member of the Composers Commissioning Committee.
